

Sphere – ASU DISC Project

The development site is currently setup as a hosted application on Sphere's ISP account at 1and1.com. This is a 'one-click' install that quickly provides a base WordPress install without having to separately setup and configure a MySQL database, PHP or anything else:

This can be easily duplicated at another ISP, or installed locally or remote by following the standard WordPress Famous 5-minute install directions:

https://codex.wordpress.org/Installing_WordPress

Currently the site is running WordPress v4.3.1. A newer version may be available, and should be installed.

Currently the site is running PHP v5.4.44. This is controlled and updated by the ISP, although on a private server you may have other versions available to install. Newer versions may be available, and should be installed. Please see the installation instructions at <http://www.php.net/>.

Currently the site is running MySQL v5.5. This is controlled and updated by the ISP, although on a private server you may have other versions available to install. Newer versions may be available, and should be installed. Please see the installation instructions at <https://www.mysql.com/>.

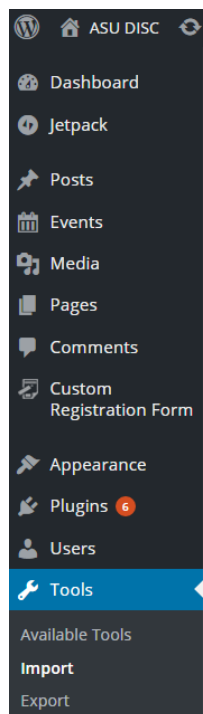

Next, a number of plugins should be installed, or verified that they are installed, by using the WordPress built-in Plugin installer:

- Akismet – (v3.1.3, by Automatic) Anti-SPAM
- CIMY Extra User Fields – (v2.6.5, by Marco Cimmino) Database Extension

All of these plugins are available through the built-in WordPress Plugin installer. Please note that versions shown are the minimum versions that should be installed; newer versions may be available and should be installed.

The final step would be to use the WordPress Import function to import the configuration of the site. On the WordPress dashboard, select Tools, the Import:

Once the import is complete, you should have a functional WordPress site.
